A SOLDIER'S GRAVE.

That's inscribed with a name to fame unknown. But green is the grass And fresh are the flowers Which garnish this grave That love's hand embowers.

And the wind sighs o'er it on summer eves Its plaintive lament through the shrubs and leaves.

And with the refrain comes a softer sigh From the heart of a love that cannot die, For true love survives The lapse of the years, Though of hope bereft,

And on summer days by this grave so green In somber array may a form be seen, Or, when o'er it is cast a shroud of snow, There undying love by this grave moans low. What does she wish for,

Though its fruit be tears.

For what does she pray In the garden of death Both winter and May?

In sad communings her thoughts backward fly To the day he bade her a last goodby, To that sadder day when he, fighting, fell For the cause he loved and she loved so well. She, a Spartan bride,

Would not say him nay, Though it broke her heart When he went away.

Others there be in that garden of death Who the loved ones recall with bated breath, Who strew bright flowers o'er their graves with a sigh

For love that lived, for the love that could die. But she, robed in black,

With the pale, sad face, Defied the long years Her love to erase.

Not wedded to death, though her love lies low And her heart feels cold in the Maytime glow, But wedded to love which lives in the past, Sustained by a hope that they'll meet at last-

A TORN STAMP.

BY CAPTAIN KENNETH GILMER. [Copyright, 1897, by the Author.]

When the Army of the Potomac started on the Wilderness campaign in the spring of 1864, there was a hasty rally of scattered commands, and men of all ranks and stations who were on furloughs, detached service and the like turned from their temporary occupations or pastimes, as do border settlers in time of Indian alarm, and rushed to the field of danger. I reached the Wilderness battleground after an air line run to Washington and a forced march across Virginia, and that, too, without an ounce of personal baggage, without money, with nothing but a soldier's regulation equipments and a scribbler's inevitable portfolio. I was a veteran campaigner, and after that fight the myriad dead whose dumb, cold forms would never again utter love messages reminded me that the dear ones left behind me would anxiously await tidings by every northern mail. A volunteer soon learned that patriot fire must be fed by dear home ties; that in order to fight well the soldier must love well, and so mother and sister and cousin and sweetheart must share the warrior's thought and affection. I wrote the usual home letters and hastily put on stamps, letting the other remain so that I might use every second of time before the bag would close. When the call sounded and the mail courier was gathering his burden, I added "just another word," closed it and reached for a stamp, but found nothing but a fragment of a 3 cent issue. "Has any one a spare stamp?" I called out. The answer from all ancignt. In my absorption I had been oblivious of the stamp famine raging around me. The agents of the friendly commissions who sometimes forward army letters were not at hand, so I scribbled across the edge of the envelope, "A soldier's battlefield letter to his sweetheart; no stamp," and tossed it into the mail bag, returning the torn stamp to my portfolio quite carelessly. For a fact the kindly countenance of the Father of His Country seemed to smile on me from that stamp as I glanced at it. I recalled some of the stories of the young British lieutenant and his amatory ardor until I fancied he was my friend whispering to me each time that I thought about my wandering missive. "It is all right, my boy; that Wilderness letter is going to Lucy," the whisper would say. We went into battle after battle, and our marching and fighting postponed all letter writing. We shouldered our way to Richmond, and I was one of the 10,000 who crawled away from Cold Harbor, maimed and bleeding, with a stinging hurt to carry for life. We were soon en route to Washington, and the river and railway conveyances were weighted with crushed and groaning humanity.

About three days after I left the field I

When I saw Washington at the end of a week, I was burning and thirsting and longing madly for something to cool the fever of lip and head and coursing veins. All about the wharfs where our steamer put in there were hucksters of every sort of repulsive trash-pies, black cakes, fat soaked doughnuts-just the sights to derange still more the famished stomach and unfit it for the coarse hospital fare which was now to follow. When we reached the new diet, it was rough, raw and tasteless and in every way unsuited to the palates of suffering men. Finally, within two or three days, we were put on board box freight cars on bare floors and hauled, with much jolting and spasmodic shakings, to Baltitremely tantalizing, "Nice fresh oranges, ten for a quarter!" A stoical warrior without a cent could repel that, but the musical throat of one young girl in the crowd had a decided charm. There was a rush to the spot by all who were able to use crutches, although there was not a dime in the entire party.

Some one called out, "Do you take stamps?" Of course the answer was 'Yes' as soon as the money panic was known to the hawkers. Some of the liveliest of the crippled ones then hustled into the barrack, and one by one they returned and counted out their last fiscal symbols and sat down on the grass to enjoy their fruit. Those who could not join certainly felt no better for looking on. Among the latter was a famishing lad whose wits had been turned by his suffering, and when he saw some of the men eating oranges he reached out and seized one from a basket and began to devour it, and that without question or bargain or pay. The girl with the musical throat looked startled at the bold act, but soon smiled and continued her cry, "Nice fresh oranges!" But the girl was only a helper of the real owner, and now a swarthy, hard looking Hun stepped forward and held his hand out to get the proceeds of the sales. He counted the money and then the oranges in the hands of the men, and as he saw there was a difference he demanded something from the girl in a jargon we could not interpret. The girl began to weep, and just then the famished boy, unconscious of everything but his desperate craving for food, reached for another orange. He secured one, but the old Hun grabbed the basket, gave the girl a rough shaking, and then, after placing his goods beyond reach of the soldiers, returned and attacked the boy. The lad was too weak to stand, but he clung to his prize, and the brutal hawker wrung the slender wrists to make him

There were some strong, cool men there who could not endure this sight, and before I could see just how the melee opened the soldiers had raided the whole pack of gypsy peddlers and gathered up every scrap of edibles, overturning the baskets and beating off the owners, some of whom fought like beasts. I could never see any glory in the black eyes and bruises of a common brawl, no matter what the occasion, and was only a sad spectator here. At the beginning of all this business I had taken a parcel of keepsakes from my pocket, and, just to make sure for the twentieth time that I had no current values seceived from the sanitary people two Bog. about me. ran over the pile carefully. The attention, and, with a flood of memories, to ders were strict and a close watch was bore my thought away from the present scene. First, Lucy's letter and what was she thinking now of me. There were two heads bending over it now, for a wounded comrade stood so close that he could look into my hand and was studying me as intently as I studied the stamp. What his thoughts were I never knew, but they were equally distracting with mine, for we two had not yielded to the passionate drift of the crowd, and when these broke out upon peddlers we alone were cool. We vainly begged them to stop, but their slogan was unanswerable in words:

"Down with the foreigners! They have no right here! We don't fight just to keep up the country for them!'

The men were mad, and the rage must work itself out. More than one badly wounded man had his hurt opened afresh in the rough and tumble encounter, and all of them retired shamefaced from their ignoble triumph.

I said to my strange mate as I held out the torn stamp, "Had this been good I would have paid for the boy's orange and prevented this trouble." Tears were in his eyes, and I saw that he was a man of sensibilities. He turned away, and the figures on his cap, which I had not noticed before, gleamed in the sunshine, and at once branded themselves upon my vision

-"142nd Vols." I left the scene with my companion, and the quicker to drop the unpleasant affair from mind, proposed that we two exchange one of our crutches. Such things are relics, and mine had come from Washington's old home, White House, Va., and my acquaintance's from Winchester, in the valley. We tried them, and were both suited, but he had carved his very neatly with several designs and with his full name in old English-"Joseph Pennington." This, too, was transferred mystically to a place in my memory and stood out boldly beside those characters I had seen on his cap, so that the legend now fixed there was, "Joseph Pennington, 142nd Vols." That evening my furlough reached me, and I was en route for my home in the Empire

State before midnight. My first act upon reaching an abiding place was to write to Lucy in New England, and then I began to count the hours until time for reply. Days went by and ran into weeks, yet none came. A second letter was written to explain the Wilderness case and my inability to dispatch another until I reached home. All this was to no effect, and finally gossip reached me in a roundabout way that Lucy had taken up with a dashing young fellow, an adventurer who had sent a substitute to battle to fight in his stead. The sequel to this gossip came just before I left home again for the front. This was a package of letters returned-my glowing camp letters of 1861-3. And the first to meet my sight, intentionally so, was the Wilderness letter, with a heavy line traced about my ingenious and ingenuous frank, thus:

A SOLDIER'S BATTLEFIELD LETTER TO HIS SWEETHEART.

Lucy aimed to be reckoned in the New England caste of Vere de Vere, and a ro mantic impulse born on the treacherous field of death found no vulnerable place in her armor of propriety. I was confused, to state it mildly, almost desperate, but when the field of war was reached again devotion to the fighting offered a good antidote, and the exciting work which followed helped to turn that affection most speedily from an object so unworthy.

In this great campaign came the climax of interest concerning this stamp. It had now come to be prized with something of that personal veneration we give to charms. A week before Richmond and Petersburg fell into the Union hands I was aroused from a sleep on the outpost bivouac in front of the latter city by a rough shaking and felt myself hurried off by force toward Lee's lines. Our men had been surprised. It was very dark, and the Confederates found such heavy fighting ahead of them when our forces received the alarm that they had to disregard the handful of prisoners taken, and so before daylight I found opportunity to steal away from the presence of the troops. Some greenbacks concealed on me purchased seclusion for the time and also a good suit of Confederate clothing. An old negro in a hut between the forts and the city helped me to these, and I found him a shrewd adviser besides. He told me to go into the interior of Dixie.

kept, but away from the lines men came and went pretty much at pleasure. One circumstance favored me and controlled all my subsequent experiences. Although I was an old campaigner, I was a beardless boy, with fair skin, and actually appeared like a schoolboy rather than a soldier in the field. Weather bronze and battle grime had not taken hold in my case, and this old man raised my hopes many degrees when he declared contemptuously at our leave taking, "Nobody gwine to bother wiv sich baby trash like yo'.' In ten days I made the circuit of the whole army of Lee and reached well known ground on the Rappahannock, near Fredericksburg. I found that Federal cavalry was posted on the north bank opposite, and concluded to join it at once and trust for a welcome despite my suit of gray. spied out my route in the morning, and then went to sleep away the day in an iso lated barn. At dusk that day I was de termined to cross the stream to the cavalry camp. But during the day, while I slept the scouts of the camp raided the whole region along that bank of the river, and ! was made prisoner to my own men. Everything was against me, and my treatment was rough, for the story I told was declared a lie. "We have too much of that," said the leader. It appeared that some of the river patrol had been foully murdered shortly before by treacherous citizens or guerrillas, and the comrades of the victims were bent on speedy revenge. They had secured nine other stragglers like myself, some in civilian and some in Confederate army dress. These unfortunates were hidden in a wooded vale beyond reach of discovery and rescue, and here they were pleading for a chance of life by military trial under the authorities at Washington. To their petitions I now added mine. But the majority of the guard advocated summary measures. My situation was a trying one. There was not a scrap of documentary evidence about me for identification. When taken by the enemy, I wore an overcoat, in the pocket of which always rested my Bible. The fly leaf was missing, and hence bore no record. I kept it wrapped in a gum cover to preserve it, and between its leaves, incased in a folded strip of blue tissue, was the torn postage stamp, the contrivance serving as a place mark and a memento as well. In the transformation made at the time of capture and escape I had parted with all else that belonged to me as a Union soldier, even my United States underclothing, shoes and stockings. The patrol which new had us in charge was an outpost guard for a large camp composed of all arms which lay back on Stafford hills. We were to die the death of outlaws at sundown, and on this day of doom I chanced to see an infantryman from the main camp coming to the cavalry bivouac with dispatches. His cap bore the characters, "142nd-Vols."

There was a rift in the cloud at once. Fortunately two of our guard were strong willed and humane and ready to favor us with kindly offices. They fed us and took our last messages for friends and directions for our identification, and from them I learned that the One Hundred and Forty-second regiment was all in the camp ave miles distant. I asked to be conducted there, but the acquaintance which I claimed was so slight that the commander demurred and declared it was simply another trick to gain time. Our kind advocates then took it up and offered to investigate the case, and soon Joseph Pennington was brought to our prison glen. Pennington, too, shook his head. When he last saw me, the pallor caused by pain and the blight of wound and fever were upon me. My recounting that affair with the hucksters in Baltimore shook him a little, but one of the guard who was zealous for our destruction broke the force of its influence most skillfully. He said: "Oh, this fellow may be only a Baltimore secesh who was hanging around that time. Come to think, I have seen him sneaking around the depots and wharfs in Baltimore and Alexandria, spying out the movements of our troops. Settled prejudices are hard to uproot. Pennington quit the scene, and we were told to get ready. Some prayed, some cried. I paced the ground like a caged tiger. There was not a guilfy one in the party-that is, guilty of the crime charged or anything like it, although there were some night riders in the crowd-some of Mosby's rangers. I could see "innocent" written upon every pallid countenance, and emotions stirred by my own grief and my sympathy for my fellows, as I thought of this useless and cruel execution, moved me beyond control. I burst into a tornado of vehement appeals aimed at any who would listen. Some ears were open. I pleaded against the shedding of innocent blood, pictured the calamity to be visited on so many homes, foretold the harrowing thoughts to arise some day in the minds of our beloved friends when they should learn the story of our vain and shameful deaths, and at last came to the point of fastening upon the would be perpetrators a lifelong re-

My eloquence-for who could not be fired with logic at such a crisis?-commanded attention and several of the guard withdrew from the sound of it. The leader stood near gloomy and cold. All this time my Bible in its close wrapper had remained in my hand, pressed instinctively to my heart, and as a last argument I turned to it to try if I could not move those obdurate hearts by reading from God's own word. As I turned the covers nervously the blue inclosure fell out, and a pregnant thought -"that stamp and Pennington"-rushed to my mind. "Here is proof!" I cried. 'Let me see Joseph Pennington again!" The hour was up, but a respite was allowed and Pennington came sullenly back. My game was desperate. I showed him that fragment stamp and told the whole story without a break. He scanned me, still skeptical, but I had put in a wedge. Doubt had arisen. After a hasty consultation the execution was deferred until daylight, and my own was then to be subject to approval of a council from the main camp. Of course I was a hero among the doomed men. About midnight word came that Lee had surrendered his army. The startling tidings instantly disarmed the passionate prejudices of the fratricidal strife. The stern judgments and fatal verdicts of martial courts were off forever, and every man of us went free, filled with a gratitude words failed to express.

The little faded fragment of a stamp is now mounted on blue silk, framed, and hangs over my cabinet. I prize it as the choicest of my collection of relics of the

Men Have Not Degenerated.

It is common to hear of the giant people who lived in the old days, yet & is decidedly uncommon to find proof that the average ancient was any larger or more powerfully built than the average person of the present day. The Egyptian mummies show these people to have been of medium size. The remains taken from the catacombs do not differ in size from the people of the present, while the armor which was worn by the warriors of the long ago fit as readily the forms of people who are not at all gigantic, or at least extraordinarily above the average, either in girth or stature. They fed us and took our last messages for friends and directions for our identification, and from them I learned that the One Hundred and Forty-second regiment was all in the camp five miles distant. I asked to be conducted there, but the acquaintance which I claimed was so slight that the commander demurred and declared it was simply another trick to gain time. Our kind advocates then took it up and offered to investigate the case, and soon Joseph Pennington was brought to our prison glen. Pennington, too, shook his head. When he last saw me, the pallor caused by pain and the blight of wound and fever were upon me. My recounting that affair with the hucksters in Baltimore shook him a little, but one of the guard who was zealous for our destruction broke the force of its influence most skillfully. He said: "Oh, this fellow may be only a Baltimore secesh who was hanging around that time. Come to think, I have seen him sneaking around the depots and wharfs in Baltimore and Alexandria, spying out the movements of our troops. Settled prejudices are hard to uproot. Pennington quit the scene, and we were told to get ready. Some prayed, some cried. I paced the ground like a caged tiger. There

I could see "innocent" written upon every pallid countenance, and emotions stirred by my own grief and my sympathy for my fellows, as I thought of this useless and cruel execution, moved me beyond control. I burst into a tornado of vehement appeals aimed at any who would listen. Some ears were open. I pleaded against the shedding of innocent blood, pictured the calamity to be visited on so many homes, foretold the harrowing thoughts to arise some day in the minds of our beloved friends when they should learn the story of our vain and shameful deaths, and at last came to the point of fastening upon the would be perpetrators a lifelong re-

All this time my Bible in its close wrapper had remained in my hand, pressed instinctively to my heart, and as a last argument I turned to it to try if I could not move those obdurate hearts by reading from God's own word. As I turned the covers nervously the blue inclosure fell out, and a pregnant thought -"that stamp and Pennington"-rushed to my mind. "Here is proof!" I cried. "Let me see Joseph Pennington again!" The hour was up, but a respite was allowed and Pennington came sullenly back. My game was desperate. I showed him that fragment stamp and told the whole story without a break. He scanned me, still skeptical, but I had put in a wedge. Doubt had arisen. After a hasty consultation the execution was deferred until daylight, and my own was then to be subject to approval of a council from the main camp. Of course I was a hero among the doomed men. About midnight word came that Lee had surrendered his army. The startling tidings instantly disarmed the passionate prejudices of the fratricidal strife. The stern judgments and fatal verdicts of martial courts were off forever, and every man of us went free, filled with a gratitude words failed to express.

The little faded fragment of a stamp is now mounted on blue silk, framed, and hangs over my cabinet. I prize it as the choicest of my collection of relics of the

It is common to hear of the giant people who lived in the old days, yet h is decidedly uncommon to find proof that the average ancient was any larger or more powerfully built than the average person of the present day. The Egyptian mummies show these people to have been of medium size. The remains taken from the catacombs do not differ in size from the people of the present, while the armor which was worn by the warriors of the long ago fit as readily the forms of people who are not at all gigantic, or at least extraordinarily above the average, either in girth or stature. ## THE SENATE EXCITED.

Senator Tillman Makes Some Grave Charges.

HE WANTS THEM INVESTIGATED.

Good Progress Made on the Tariff and the Committee's Report Not Amended. A Strong Effort Made to Reduce the Tariff on Window Glass.

WASHINGTON, May 28. - After a long period of silence Senator Tillman (S. C.) startled the senate by a speech no less dramatic in its delivery than sensational in its allegations. He preceded it by presenting a resolution for the appointment of a special committee of five senators to investigate charges of speculation by senators while the tariff bill was before the finance committee. In advocating the resolution Mr. Tillman threw aside the usual conventionalities of the senate and, with a plainness of speech seldom heard about the halls of congress, called on his associates to investigate the published charges of senatorial speculation, and if found true, to purge the senate of those who debauched it.

Mr. Aldrich, in charge of the tariff fumigation." bill, answered Mr. Tillman in a sweep-

The Tillman resolution was referred to the committee on contingent expenses of the senate

Considerable progress was made on the tariff bill, 13 pages being covered. Several votes were taken during the day, but the finance committee had a liberal majority in every instance. The Democratic members of the finance committee made a strong effort to reduce the rates on window glass, but their amendments to this effect were defeated. The bill is to be considered today, the usual Saturday recess being abandoned.

Mr. Tillman's resolution quotes the senate resolution of May 17, 1894, authorizing the original inquiry and then after reciting the proceedings in the Chapman and Havemeyer trials,

Whereas, Within the last 30 days sundry newspapaper correspondents have openly charged senators with speculating in sugar stocks while the sugar schedule is under discussion, and also charged that brokers in New York knew in advance as to what the senate finance committee would report as to the sugar schedule, all of which involves a question of the highest privilege, to wit: The right of the senate to protect its members from slander and to protect the body as a whole from these open charges of corruption; therefore, be it

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed with power to send for persons and papers, to employ a stenographer and to administer oaths, to inquire into the truth or falsehood of the charges made in May, 1894, and into the charges recently made, and the scope of the investigation shall cover everything embraced in the resolution of May 17, 1894, as well as the thods pursued by the American Sugar Refining company, better known as the Sugar trust, in controlling legislation in its favor at the present time. And especially whether it has in any wise contributed to or controlled the election of a senator in this body at any time.

The presiding officer, Mr. Frye, promptly ruled that the resolution should go to the committee, on contingent expenses, but Mr. Tillman obtained consent to make a statement.

"We have arrived at a time, he began, "when the senate can no longer afford to rest under the damning accusations made against senators. there are men here debauching the senate then we should be purged of them. If these reports are slanders, then the press galleries should be purged. We cannot afford to lay back on our dignity any longer and say we will not investigate.

It had been charged that President Cleveland met the sugar magnates on a yacht and discussed details of the schedule of the then pending tariff bill. There was nothing to fasten that "damning accusation" on the president, Mr. Tillman said, but Senator Jones (Ark.) had recently furnished evidence to the effect that the president told him the trust should have one-fourth cent a pound.

Mr. Jones quickly arose and stated that on two occasions Mr. Cleveland had said to him that he thought the one-fourth cent on raw sugar was necessary to the American renners and that a one-eighth cent rate would drive the refiners out of business.

Proceeding, Mr. Tillman said that it might be Mr. Cleveland's desire to carry out a bargain, and if so, the senate ought to find it out. Here Mr. Gray (Del.), chairman of the former sugar investigating committee, interrupted. The statement, he said, that a sugar schedule had been made upon Mr. Benedict's yacht when the president was on board with officers of the sugar trust was not true, and its falsity had been established after the committee had probed the statement to the bottom.

Continuing, Mr. Tillman exclaimed: "Both parties are involved, and one is as deep in the mud as the other is the mire. You know of the reports ugainst pertain members of the old finance committee, and now we have more damning accusations against the present committee.'

Mr. Pettus (Ala.) interrupted to ask Mr. Tillman not to deal in generalities, but to put a mark on the senators by

"That is what I want an inquiry for -to mark these men," responded Mr. Tillman. "I do not want the poor man to suffer while the millionaires are turned loose."

After protests from Mr. Pettus that Mr. Tillman should name at least one senator accused, Mr. Tillman went on to state that when the former tariff bill was framed the finance committee had left their committee room and had taken quarters at the Arnngton notes "The senator is grossly mistaken," interrupted Mr. Vest of the finance committee. "The Democratic members of the finance committee did not go to tne Arlington hotel or anywhere else outside their committee room at the Tillman said he was glad the Democratic party was relieved to this extent. but added: "Now no one denies that for the last two months rooms at the Arlington have been occupied by the finance committee, in easy touch with the telephone to New York and easy reach of agents of the Sugar trust." Why was it, he asked that the Sugar trust can always command a specific instead of an advalorem duty? Why was it that they cleared $25,000,000 in three years it was the Democratic party who made it possible in 1894.

"And now," he proceeded, "with a disgraced and demoralized Democratic party out of power, and the Republicans in charge of affairs, we have another damning evidence of the Sugar trust's power.'

Mr. Tillman said he would now present specifications, and had read a number of signed articles in the newspapers of New York, Chicago and elsewhere, making serious charges against senators, some by name.

Mr. Tillman said it was about time these specific charges, most of them signed with the names of their authors, should be probed. There should be no mixture of the old investigation and the new one. "Let us not mix up the Democratic sheep with the Republican goats," he said. "But let us have a

In conclusion, Mr. Tillman reiterated that if the senate is "rotten to the bot. tom" it should be proved. If these charges were false, then the lies should be laid bare. If the charges were true, then, he said, the guilty senators should be turned out and the senate purged.

Mr. Aldrich, Republican member of the finance committee and in charge of the tariff bill, immediately took the floor as Mr. Tillman closed. It had been charged, or inferred, he said, that the sugar trust dictated the sugar schedule.

"But I desire to say to the senate, to the senator (Tillman) and to every man in the United States that no person connected with the sugar trust at any time or at any place influenced the framing of the sugar schedule, or received information a s to its character. I desire to make the statement as broad as the English language can make it."

Mr. Aldrich said that no living person outside of the members of the committee had any information as to the per cent and never lower. subject until 36 hours before it was reported. Then the senator from Nevada (Jones) had been shown the schedule. No human being beyond this had received the slightest infor-

Mr. Tillman interrupted to say that he had not made the charges; he had mereiy submitted public statements with the autnors names signed.

It was easy for correspondents to make such charges, but they were absolutely false. Without further debate the resolution was referred to the cammittee on contingent expenses, and. on motion of Mr. Aldrich the senate took up the tariff bill.

Mr. Vest opposed the proposed increase on soda ash from one fourth to three-tenths of a cent per pound as unfair to soapmakers, and that it would not have been made but for the fact that Mr. Jones (Nev.), where the principal deposits of soda ash in the country are found, is a member of the finance committee. The amendment was agreed to without division, but was reconsidered and allowed to go over to permit Mr. Gray to be heard on it.

There was only a brief discussion of the remaining paragraphs in the chemical schedule, Mr. Jones stating that while they were not accepted without protest by the Democrats those in charge of the Democratic interests considered it unnecessary to consume time to no avail with the voting majority so evidently against them.

The next schedule, relating to earths. earthenware and glassware, was entered upon. An amendment limiting the fire brick to be imported to be imported at $1.20 per ton to those weighing less than ten pounds each was adopted.

The duty on Portland and other hydraulic cements in barrels and sacks was increased from 8 to 11 cents per hundredweight and in bulk from 7 to 10 cents per hundredweight. After Mr. White had criticized the increase as opposed to the interests of builders and Mr. Pettigrew had defended it, saying it should be greater in the interest of American manufacturers.

Mr. Vest criticised, but to no avail, the rate proposed on glass bottles, decanters, etc. as equal to the McKinley rate, the highest, he said, in the countrr's history.

Mr. Jones (Ark.) objected in a vigorous speech to the rate fixed on window glass. It was universal consumption and was in the hands of trusts, two associations controlling practicully the business in this country and dividing the territory and fixing rates. "Among all the iniquities of the bill," said he, "and their name is legion, the glass schedule is the most monstrous."

Mr. Sewell (Rep., N. J.) challenged Mr. Jones' statements, saying there were individual glass makers in his state outside of any trust and struggling for existence against foreign competi-

Mr. Mills (Tex.) said the glass rates were enormous and unjustifiable, running from 115 to 168 per cent.

Mr. Jones' amendment to reduce the rate on windowglass from 11/2 to 1 cent per pound was disagreed to-yeas, 18; nays, 28. The committee rate of 114 cents was then agreed to. Mr. Jones (Ark.) offered another

Mr. Aldrich yielded to urgent requests from Democratic senators that the bill be laid aside. The senate then went into executive session and soon after adjourned.

capitol. Tillman said he was glad the Democratic party was relieved to this extent. but added: "Now no one denies that for the last two months rooms at the Arlington have been occupied by the finance committee, in easy touch with the telephone to New York and easy reach of agents of the Sugar trust." Why was it, he asked that the Sugar trust can always command a specific instead of an advalorem duty? was it that they cleared $25,000,000 in three years it was the Democratic party who made it possible in 1894. "And now," he proceeded, "with a C.) startled the senate by a speech no disgraced and demoralized Democratic party out of power, and the Republicans in charge of affairs, we have another damning evidence of the Sugar

Mr. Tillman said he would now present specifications, and had read a number of signed articles in the newspapers of New York, Chicago and elsewhere, making serious charges against senators, some by name.

Mr. Tillman said it was about time these specific charges, most of them signed with the names of their authors, should be probed. There should be no mixture of the old investigation and the new one. "Let us not mix up the Democratic sheep with the Republican goats," he said. "But let us have a

In conclusion, Mr. Tillman reiterated that if the senate is "rotten to the bot-The Tillman resolution was referred tom" it should be proved. If these charges were false, then the lies should be laid bare. If the charges were true, then, he said, the guilty senators should be turned out and the senate purged.

Mr. Aldrich, Republican member of the finance committee and in charge of the tariff bill, immediately took the floor as Mr. Tillman closed. It had been charged, or inferred, he said, that the sugar trust dictated the sugar

"But I desire to say to the senate, to the senator (Tillman) and to every man in the United States that no person connected with the sugar trust at any time or at any place influenced the framing of the sugar schedule, or received information a s to its character. I desire to make the statement as broad as the English language can make it."

Mr. Aldrich said that no living person outside of the members of the committee had any information as to the per cent and never lower. subject until 36 hours before it was reported. Then the senator from Nevada (Jones) had been shown the schedule. No human being beyond this had received the slightest information.

"And any man who says so, or intimates so," added Mr. Alarich, "deserves to be denounced in a way which would not be parliamentary here.

Mr. Tillman interrupted to say that he had not made the charges; he had merely submitted public statements with the authors names signed.

Mr- Aldrich proceeding said the fullest investigation was courted, there by the elk. He cannot recover. was nothing to conceal. No information ever went from that committee room to anyone. He (Aldrich) had never bought or sold a share of sugar stock. It was easy for correspondents to make such charges, but they were absolutely false. Without further debate the resolution was referred to the cammittee on contingent expenses, and. on motion of Mr. Aldrich the senate took up the tariff bill.

Mr. Vest opposed the proposed increase on soda ash from one fourth to three-tenths of a cent per pound as unfair to soapmakers, and that it would not have been made but for the fact that Mr. Jones (Nev.), where the principal deposits of soda ash in the country are found, is a member of the finance committee. The amendment was agreed to without division, but was reconsidered and allowed to go over to permit Mr. Gray to be heard on it.

There was only a brief discussion of the remaining paragraphs in the chemical schedule, Mr. Jones stating that while they were not accepted without protest by the Democrats those in charge of the Democratic interests considered it unnecessary to consume time to no avail with the voting majority so evidently against them.

The next schedule, relating to earths. earthenware and glassware, was entered upon. An amendment limiting the fire brick to be imported to be imported at $1.20 per ton to those weighing less than ten pounds each was adopted.

The duty on Portland and other hydraulic cements in barrels and sacks was increased from 8 to 11 cents per hundredweight and in bulk from 7 to 10 cents per hundredweight. After Mr. White had criticized the increase as opposed to the interests of builders and Mr. Pettigrew had defended it, saying it should be greater in the interest of American manufacturers. Mr. Vest criticised, but to no avail, the rate proposed on glass bottles, decanters, etc. as equal to the McKinley rate, the highest, he said, in the countrr's history.

Mr. Jones (Ark.) objected in a vigorous speech to the rate fixed on window glass. It was universal consumption and was in the hands of trusts, two associations controlling practicully the business in this country and dividing the territory and fixing rates. "Among all the iniquities of the bill," said he, and their name is legion, the glass schedule is the most monstrous." Mr. Sewell (Rep., N. J.) challenged Mr. Jones' statements, saying there were individual glass makers in his state outside of any trust and struggling for existence against foreign competi-

Mr. Mills (Tex.) said the glass rates were enormous and unjustifiable, running from 115 to 168 per cent.

Mr. Jones' amendment to reduce the rate on windowglass from 11/2 to 1 cent per pound was disagreed to-yeas, 18; nays, 28. The committee rate of 11/4

Amendment reducing the rate on windowglass above 10x15 inches square and under 10z20 from 1% to 114 cents per pound. The amendment was disagreed to-18 to 27. All of the committee amendments as to windowglass were

FORGED NATURALIZATION PAPERS.

A Man Arrested In England For Bigamy Denied the Court's Authority.

CLEVELAND, May 29 .- M. Archer Jeston Secretan, and a Mrs. Fowler, prominent and wealthy residents of Toronto, came to Cleveland in October, 1896, and were quietly married. Lately they went to England and have been followed there by Secretan's first wife, who at once had him arrested for bigamy. The case is in the high court in London.

show that he had been granted a divorce from nis first wife by the common pleas court in Cleveland, and that he had been made a citizen of the United States by the same court, thereby placing him beyond the authority of the English courts in this case. ## SETTLED BURFORD LOSS

The Adjustors Finished the Work Last Night.

ALMOST THIRTEEN THOUSAND

The Machinery Was the Largest Item of Loss-Dresden Company Was Allowed a Few Hundred-It Looked as Though There Would Be a Squabble.

The adjusters who spent two days going over those portions of the Burford pottery destroyed by fire a week ago last night, reached a decision last night, giving the company $12,920, and the Dresden $495.24. The first adjustor on instinct. Sceretan produced documents to the ground was Walter P. Dickerson, of Cincinnati, and F. D. Carroll, Cleveland; Joseph Dyer, Cincinnati; Mr. Gooch, Columbus; Mr. Wyman, Cleveland, were not long in reaching the city. The work was done quickly. The loss is divided as follows: Old building blood. $3,029.13, machinery $7,035.12, stock $2,681.56, stock in new building $175. The Dresden loss was fixed without difficulty. At one time it seemed that there would be a serious disagreement, but all difficulties were quickly patched up, and the decision reached. The adjustors left the city this morning with wipes away wrinkles, and gives to the comeran church has closed its sessions here the exception of Mr. Dickerson, who plexion its natural clearness and bloom. will remain until next week.

A force was put to work this morning cleaning away the debris, and the new building will be started at once. The company has a large amount of stock, and decorators will soon have it ready for the market. In 60 days the Burford plant will be in operation as usual.

What Befel a Resident Who Actes Upon a Plan Suggested from Reading a Newspaper Item.

When the east end of the corporation was called Ohio City, long before the street cars connected it with East Liver pool, when residents out there eithe walked, rode or took the railway to ge to the city, Mrs. Mary A. Hewitt, whe now lives on St. George street, was a resident. If not personally known to everyone in East Liverpool, it is an easy matter for anyone interested to verify by an interview the facts contained in the following statement. Testimony from people we know, whom we can depend upon, is away ahead of a long-winded account of some cure that is said to have taken place in some remote part of the Union. What follows is East Liverpool evidence for East Liverpool people. Read it. Mrs. Hewitt says: "About six it. Mrs. Hewitt says: months ago I read in the Pittsburg Press cured of kidney disease in that city by using Doan's Kidney Pills. The fact of such an account being published of one living in almost the same place had a tendency to convince me that there must be some truth in it, and I determined to a very severe attack of rheumatism. For three months I lay helpless, and since then I have had trouble with my kidneys. For a year I suffered severely. My back boil where the kidneys are. I could not bend over, lean back against a chair, or reach up. I could not lie on my back, and about every move I made caused pain. I had taken numerous remedies, but none brought the desired relief while Doan's Kidney Pills did what no other remedy was able to do. I took them regularly for a short time, and paper stated them to be. I can heartily recommend them. Since using them I am rid of the backache and other symptoms of kidney disease, and could not feel better." Plenty more such testimony as this is being published here in East Liverpool daily. she Didn't Thank Him.

Women say thank you more frequently now than formerly when men in crowded street cars give them seats, but sometimes they don't. One didn't the other day when she boarded a Broadway somely dressed and had the manner of one of assured position in the social world. She found all the seats taken and moved with graceful deliberation to the front of the car, where, in the end seat, a man, also well dressed and at ease, was reading a paper. Just as the car came to a standstill by reason of a block he looked up, and, seeing the woman standing, offered her his seat. She took it, and in the hush which had fallen upon the waiting passengers her failure to express thanks or even so much as bow her head was especially noticeable. The man held the strap he had taken but a moment and then, leaning over toward the woman, as though by way of making a reply, said: "Not at all, madam. You're quite welcome, I'm sure." She blushed slightly and smiled, but a furtive glance along the rows of watching faces showed her that all had noticed the rebuke and recognized it as such. She turned quickly and looked ahead out of the window, but she was a woman, and, unable to remain in ignorance of the effect created by the incident, she turned again. All the passengers were looking at her and smiling. When she again looked out of the window, which she did as soon as she could turn her head, the blush had changed to a deep scarlet, extending from the collar of her dress to the roots of her hair. When the car had moved ahead for two blocks, she got out, and everybody who remained felt sure she will not again accept a seat in a street car without thanking the person who gives it to her. - New York Times.

Safe Course.

An excellent reply was that once made by a Yankee pilot to the owner of a Mississippi river steamboat.

The boat was at New Orleans, and the Yankee applied for the vacant post of pilot, saying that he thought he could give satisfaction provided they were "lookin for a man about his size and build."

"Your size and build will do well enough," said the owner, surveying the lank form and rugged face of the applicant with some amusement, "but do you know about the river, where the snags are and so on?"

"Well, I'm pretty well acquainted with the river," drawled the Yankee, with his eyes fixed on a stick he was whittling "hat when you come to talkin York Herald.

she Didn't Thank Him.

Women say thank you more frequently now than formerly when men in crowded street cars give them seats, but sometimes they don't. One didn't the other day when she boarded a Broadway car at Fourteenth street. She was handsomely dressed and had the manner of one of assured position in the social world. She found all the seats taken and moved with graceful deliberation to the front of the car, where, in the end seat, a man, also well dressed and at ease, was reading a paper. Just as the car came to a standstill by reason of a block he looked up, and, seeing the woman standing, offered her his seat. She took it, and in the hush which had fallen upon the waiting passengers her failure to express thanks or even so much as bow her head was especially noticeable. The man held the strap he had taken but a moment and then, leaning over toward the woman, as though by way of making a reply, said: "Not at all, madam. You're quite welcome, I'm sure." She blushed slightly and smiled, but a furtive glance along the rows of watching faces showed her that all had noticed the rebuke and recognized it as such. She turned quickly and looked ahead out of the window, but she was a woman, and, unable to remain in ignorance of the effect created by the incident, she turned again. All the passengers were looking at her and smiling. When she again looked out of the window, which she did as soon as she could turn her head, the blush had changed to a deep scarlet, extending from the collar of her dress to the roots of her hair. When the car had moved ahead for two blocks, she got out, and everybody who remained felt sure she will not again accept a seat in a street car without thanking the person who gives it to her. -New York Times.

about the snags I don't know exactly where they are, I must say.

"Don't know where the snags are?" said the boat owner in a tone of disgust. "Then how do you expect to get a position as pilot on this river?"

"Well, sir," said the Yankee, raising a pair of keen eyes from his whittling and meeting his questioner's stern gaze with a whimsical smile, "I may not know just where the snags are, but you can depend upon me for knowin where they ain't, and that's where I calculate to do my sailin. ### Remark Betrayed Him.

He sat in the smoking compartment of the parlor car complacently puffing a Perfecto. His easy manner and his polished language proclaimed him to be a man of the world.

"Of one thing I am certain," he said, "and that is that I understand women thoroughly and completely."

His fellow passengers looked at each other uneasily and made various excuses to leave the compartment.

Two keepers boarded the train at the next station and took the solitary smoker into custody. He had escaped from an insane asylum that morning.-New whittling "hat when you come to talkin York Herald.

Discussion Settled by a Woman.

About 5 o'clock in the afternoon of a muddy day the thin man left the Rookery building and started south on the east side of Lasalle street. The sidewalk in front of a new building was nearly ankle deep with mud. Planks had been laid across the area of black paste. The thin man reached one of these planks just as a fat man who was coming from the direction of the board of trade stepped on the other end. Each of the men walked with his head down. They met squarely in the middle of the plank, and each waited for the other to step aside and let him pass. "Excuse me, sir," said the fat man

'Be careful, sir," said the thin man as he grabbed the fat man's arm to save himself from being pushed off into the mud, "or I'll fall off."

"Well, don't hold on to me," said the self. Can't you step aside?" "No, sir, I can't," answered the thin man. "How in the world can I? Anyway I think I was the first on the plank." 'Huh, I'm not so sure about that!" returned the fat man.

"Well, what are you going to do about it," said the thin man, folding

his arms. "I can't get off to let you

"Well, sir, don't you think, sir, that I'm going to get off to let you pass,' retorted the fat man, with a shake of the fist. Just then a woman with an armful of bundles stepped on the plank. The fat man saw her and stepped off with his right foot into the mud and drew his body aside. The woman passed him. The thin man hunted for what he thought was a shallow spot and stepped off with his left foot. The woman went on. The men looked at each other and edged past, each with one foot in the mud and one on the plank and the evil glare in their eyes. They seemed to be thinking, "Oh, if it hadn't been for that woman!"-Chicago Tribune.

Organ and Dog In Sympathy.

There is an old adage that "music hath charms to soothe a savage breast,' but this is not always the case. At the corner of Beacon and Mount Vernon streets in Boston may be found almost every evening just at dusk an old lady bundled up in whawls and wraps turning the crank of a little paper hand organ. The sounds issuing from the instrument cannot be termed sweet, and to a hypersensitive ear they are painful.

The other evening, as the observer of the Boston Post was passing the musician, a Gordon setter came running along. He had evidently lost his master, for there was an anxious expression on his handsome face. When in front of the organ grinder he stopped. The absence of his owner was trying enough, but that music was the last straw. Throwing back his head, he gave a howl that sounded like the wail of a lost soul. Not once, but time and again the animal poured forth his sorrow. Had the observer been a theosophist in belief, he would have declared that the dog contained the spirit of a musical critic. Yet the old lady was oblivious to it all, and the organ played on.

Rothschild's Broken Cornice.

One of the features of the magnificent London mansion of Lord Rothschild, which adjoins Aspley House, the residence of the Duke of Wellington, is the unfinished piece of superb cornice in the great marble hall. This is in accordance with the Hebrew precept which forbids any devout believer in the Talmud to regard his home on earth as anything but temporary and therefore incomplete. Lord Rothschild's particular hobby is the Jews' free school in the Whitechapel district of London, which has an average daily attendance of 4,000 children, probably the largest roster of any school in the world. This institution is maintained entirely by the peer, and it is probably the only school of the kind where each child is provided free of cost with a good breakfast of hot milk and bread and butter before beginning the day's studies. Each pupil receives a new suit of clothes once a year, and Lord Rothschild encourages thrift among the pupils by paying them an interest of 10 per cent per annum on whatever money they are able to save or earn and to put by. - Chicago Record.

The Ideal National Flower.

When a flower is found which can arouse widepread and genuine patriotic enthusiasm or has become associated closely with some great and universally beloved man or woman, it will become the national emblem without the necessity of legislative action, except as a formal ratification of a universal sentiment. Under such circumstances only will people relegate their personal floral favorites to a second place. It will not matter, when this event happens, whether it is a plant useful to man or a weed. It will become the national flower just the same. It was this sentiment which made the thistle the national flower of Scotland and the cornflower the national flower of the German empire, and it must be a similar chain of circumstances which gives us a national flower. - Philadelphia Ledger.

Discussion Settled by a Woman.

About 5 o'clock in the afternoon of a muddy day the thin man left the Rookery building and started south on the east side of Lasalle street. The sidewalk in front of a new building was nearly ankle deep with mud. Planks had been laid across the area of black paste. The thin man reached one of these planks just as a fat man who was coming from the direction of the board of trade stepped on the other end. Each of the men walked with his head down. They met squarely in the middle of the plank, and each waited for the other to step aside and let him pass.

"Excuse me, sir," said the fat man

"Be careful, sir," said the thin man as he grabbed the fat man's arm to save himself from being pushed off into the mud, "or I'll fall off." "Well, don't hold on to me," said the self. Can't you step aside?" "No, sir, I can't," answered the thin man. "How in the world can I? Anyway I think I was the first on the plank.

"Huh, I'm not so sure about that!" returned the fat man. "Well, what are you going to do about it," said the thin man, folding

his arms. "I can't get off to let you

"Well, sir, don't you think, sir, that I'm going to get off to let you pass,' retorted the fat man, with a shake of the fist. Just then a woman with an armful of bundles stepped on the plank. The fat man saw her and stepped off with his right foot into the mud and drew his body aside. The woman passed him. The thin man hunted for what he thought was a shallow spot and stepped off with his left foot. The woman went on. The men looked at each other and edged past, each with one foot in the mud and one on the plank and the evil glare in their eyes. They seemed to be thinking, "Oh, if it hadn't been for that woman!''-Chicago Tribune.

Organ and Dog In Sympathy.

There is an old adage that "music hath charms to soothe a savage breast,' but this is not always the case. At the corner of Beacon and Mount Vernon streets in Boston may be found almost every evening just at dusk an old lady ing the crank of a little paper hand organ. The sounds issuing from the instrument cannot be termed sweet, and to a hypersensitive ear they are painful.

The other evening, as the observer of the Boston Post was passing the musician, a Gordon setter came running along. He had evidently lost his master, for there was an anxious expression on his handsome face. When in front of the organ grinder he stopped. The absence of his owner was trying enough, but that music was the last straw. Throwing back his head, he gave a howl that sounded like the wail of a lost soul. mal poured forth his sorrow. Had the observer been a theosophist in belief, he would have declared that the dog centained the spirit of a musical critic. Yet the old lady was oblivious to it all, and the organ played on.

Rothschild's Broken Cornice.

One of the features of the magnificent London mansion of Lord Rothschild, which adjoins Aspley House, the residence of the Dake of Wellington, is the unfinished piece of superb cornice in the great marble hall. This is in accordance with the Hebrew precept which forbids any devout believer in the Talmud to regard his home on earth as anything but temporary and therefore incomplete. Lord Rothschild's particular hobby is the Jews' free school in the Whitechapel district of London, which has an average daily attendance of 4,000 children, probably the largest roster of any school in the world. This institution is maintained entirely by the peer, and it is probably the only school of the kind where each child is provided free of cost with a good breakfast of hot milk and bread and butter before beginning the day's studies. Each pupil receives a new suit of clothes once a year, and Lord Rothschild encourages thrift among the pupils by paying them an interest of 10 per cent per annum on whatever money they are able to save or earn and to put by. —Chicago Record.

The Ideal National Flower. When a flower is found which can arouse widepread and genuine patriotic enthusiasm or has become associated closely with some great and universally beloved man or woman, it will become the national emblem without the necessity of legislative action, except as a formal ratification of a universal sentiment. Under such circumstances only will people relegate their personal floral favorites to a second place. It will not matter, when this event happens, whether it is a plant useful to man or a weed. It will become the national flower just the same. It was this sentiment which made the thistle the national flower of Scotland and the cornflower the national flower of the German empire, and it must be a similar chain of circumstances which gives us a national flower. - Philadelphia Ledger.

THIRTEEN GOOD PRODUCTIONS

The Music Was Much Better Than Usual, the Chorus Showing Training and Talent-Beautiful Effect Through the Butterfly March-The Diplomas Were Presented by Superintendent Sanor After a Strong Address--A Pleasing and Sucthe School Year.

Twenty-three members of the class of '97 of the high school were formally graduated at the Grand opera house in the presence of a vast assemblage last night.

The stage was decorated in the colors of the nation and the class, and presented a pretty appearance. When the curtain arose Miss Nina Adams sat at the piano, and to beautiful strains graduates marched to their places. Closely following came a beavy of little girls gathering the garlands of flowers that had been born by the class. Superintendent Sanor and Professor O. S. Reed took their places in front, and an eloquent prayer by the minister was followed by a chorus, the class being assisted by other members of the high school.

"A Group of Patriots," was an oration by Miss Naomi Shontz, and the first on the program. The young lady reviewed the life and works of Whittier, Emerson. Calhoun, Webster and Clay, and said their memories would ever remain dear to the American people, closing with the thought that each should cherish at all times liberty and union now and forever. It was an excellent one, and won hearty applause.

"The Kingdom of Scrub," by Miss Clara Bursner, was an excellently prepared essay on a subject of every day life. She pictured the home as a castle where woman did the scrubbing and man reigned as king. The story of how floors were scrubbed and cleaned only to be dirtied by man's muddy feet was told in a few words. She said the day was coming when if given the opportunities and advantages the ability of woman would be recognized as equal to that of man and she would unsurp his

"The Bravery of the Soul," by Miss Anna Ormes, contained many beautiful thoughts. In a concise way her hearers were told how the soul was the principal life, and without it nothing could exist. A brave soul was described as one that encountered the greatest hardships without fear and made men on earth famous, in the grave illustrious and in heaven immortal.

A double quartet rendered "Swannee River" splendidly, and Miss Maud Webster pictured death as "Life's Shadow." A pathetic story was told of an Italian returning home with his foreign born wife and child. They settled in a small villa but in a short time the angel of death came and took away the wife and mother. The father was called to her in a short time, and the child started to find his foreign relatives. Arriving in the strange city he wandered for a few days and at last lay down on the doorstep of a church and passed to the other side to join his parents.

George Whitaker struck a popular chord in his oration on "Arbitration." He related how it had made its greatest advancement in the nineteenth century, because previous to this time the lines of government were in the hands of ambitious rulers who sought to conquer the world. War was styled as the barbarian method of settling difficulties. He closed by stating that this country was fast becoming the foremost nation of the earth, and would soon be in the your chief reliance will be in your moral best position as a peacemaker for the

It is said that causes produce effects, and it is true that effects are produced when the causes cannot be ascertained. In nature there is some phenomena inexplicable because we have no way of ascertaining the cause. WAITING ON ACTION OF CONGRESS.

the Iron Manufacture Gains In Spite of Closing of Furnaces-Woolen Mills Are Doing a Big Business-The Failures For the Week.

NEW YORK, May 29.-R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade, issued today, says: People are actually doing more business than they realize. They reckon by values, but these are much lower than in any previous year of prosperity and leave little margin for profits. In quantity there is almost as much business being done as the years of greatest prosperity, and though the increase in population would call for a material expansion the comparison is not discouraging. The recovery is slow, hesitating and gradual, but more has been done on the whole in May than in April, while returning of April showed the volume of business only 10 per cent smaller than that of the best year heretofore. Yet hesitation is doing its work every week and multitudes are waiting because of possibili-ties at Washington, who ought to be filling the demand for labor and the products of labor.

Events have proved that the crop of wheat going out is much larger than any of the markets expected, and western receipts for the week were 30 per cent larger than last year, while Atlantic exports have been for four weeks 6.315,329 bushels, flour included, against 4,988,777 last year. At this season actual receipts count, rather than predictions, and the truth is that the country has exported an extraordinary quantity of wheat and flour, and yet has so much to spare that the May options has declided nearly a cent for the week. Besides, the outgo of corn largely taking the place of wheat in foreign consumption, is far beyond precedent or expectation, and for four weeks has been 9,360,091, against 6,001, 985 last year. With liberal interior supplies, the price has declined a fraction. Cotton is unchanged, although For return of Trade-Marks. ALL at this season exports are insignificant.

Manufacturers have especial causes of delay owing to the possible competition with foreign goods largely imported, but there has been no set back in prices. although cotton goods are dull without large demand and print cloths are at the bottom price. It is evident that production far beyond the consuming demand has forced the industry into a waiting attitude. Distribution of all drygoods is at present restored also by cooler weather than is usual at this season. The woolen mills are producing more than they have done for years, would like to produce, and manufacturers are doing almost nothing in the wool market, though speculation has kept the sales large, in four weeks of May 28,805,500 pounds, against 20,159,-350 pounds in the corresponding weeks of 1892. There is some weakness observable with western holders, and eastern prices pegin to feel the weight of enormous imports, although holders still calculate on a rise as soon as new duties take effect. The iron manufacture gains in spite of the closing of some furnaces. The production of pig exceeds consumption and is somewhat decreasing, while the consumption has gradually gained this week, in part because of several structural contracts, including 7,000 tons for this city alone, and in part because the agricultural implement works have made larger demands, and also because of the proposed leasing of nearly all the rod mills in the country, which has caused some buying. Pig iron shows no change in price, but it is noteworthy that an advance of 25 cents in the British price of American pig is considered a relief as lessening the urgency to sell southern pig in northern markets. Cotton ties at 50 cents per bundle have quite shut out foreign competition. Tin and copper are sironger, but the tinplate makers have agreed upon an advance, and yet the best grade sells as before, at 3.30, against 3.80 for the foreign.

Failures for the week have been 214 in the United States, the smallest in any week since September, 1895, against 239 last year, and 22 in Canada, against 20 last year.

THE AMALGAMATED STRUGGLE. Will Have a Fight With Manufacturers Over Tinplate Scale.

DETROIT, May 29 .- The annual convention of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of America, has completed its sessions. President Mahlon M. Garland was again re-elected. Stephen Madden was elected secretary and treasurer and John Williams, assistant secretary; trustees, John Pierce and Theodore Shaffer of Pittsburg, and Daniel Mullane of Youngstown. President Garland was chosen delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention next December.

The association's representatives will meet the mannfacturers in Pittsburg a few days hence, and there will be a struggle over the tinplate wage scale, the manufacturers having repeatedly declared that they will not grant the increase of about 15 per cent scheduled by the Amalgamated association.

DUN'S TRADE REVIEW.

WAITING ON ACTION OF CONGRESS.

the Iron Manufacture Gains In Spite of Closing of Furnaces-Woolen Mills Are Doing a Big Business-The Failures For the Week.

NEW YORK, May 29.-R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade, issued today, says: People are actually doing more business than they realize. They reckon by values, but these are much lower than in any previous year of prosperity and leave little margin for profits. In quantity there is almost as much business being done as the years of greatest prosperity, and though the increase in population would call for a material expansion the comparison is not discouraging. The recovery 18 slow, hesitating and gradual, but more has been done on the whole in May than in April, while returning of April showed the volume of business only 10 per cent smaller than that of the best year heretofore. Yet hesitation is doing its work every week and multitudes are waiting because of possibilities at Washington, who ought to be filling the demand for labor and the products of labor.

Events have proved that the crop of wheat going out is much larger than any of the markets expected, and western receipts for the week were 30 per cent larger than last year, while Atlantic exports have been for four weeks 6,315,329 bushels, flour included, against 4,988,777 last year. At this season actual receipts count, rather than predictions, and the truth is that the country has exported an extraordinary quantity of wheat and flour, and yet has so much to spare that the May options has declided nearly a cent for the week. Besides, the outgo of corn largely taking the place of wheat in foreign consumption, is far beyond precedent or expectation, and for four weeks has been 9,360,091, against 6,001, 985 last year. With liberal interior supplies, the price has declined a fraction. Cotton is unchanged, although at this season exports are insignificant.

Manufacturers have especial causes of delay owing to the possible competition with foreign goods largely imported, but there has been no set back in prices. although cotton goods are dull without large demand and print cloths are at the bottom price. It is evident that production far beyond the consuming demand has forced the industry into a waiting attitude. Distribution of all drygoods is at present restored also by cooler weather than is usual at this season. The woolen mills are producing though much less than they could or would like to produce, and manufacturers are doing almost nothing in the wool market, though speculation has kept the sales large, in four weeks of May 28,805,500 pounds, against 20,159,-350 pounds in the corresponding weeks of 1892. There is some weakness observable with western holders, and eastern prices pegin to feel the weight of enormous imports, although holders still calculate on a rise as soon as new duties take effect.

The iron manufacture gains in spite of the closing of some furnaces. The production of pig exceeds consumption and is somewhat decreasing, while the consumption has gradually gained this week, in part because of several structural contracts, including 7,000 tons for this city alone, and in part because the agricultural implement works have made larger demands, and also because of the proposed leasing of nearly all the rod mills in the country, which has caused some buying. Fig iron shows no change in price, but it is noteworthy that an advance of 25 cents in the British price of American pig is considered a relief as lessening the urgency to sell southern pig in northern markets. Cotton ties at 50 cents per bundle have quite shut out foreign competition. Tin and copper are sironger, but the tinplate makers have agreed upon an advance, and yet the best grade sells as before, at 3.30, against 3.80 for the foreign.

Failures for the week have been 214 in the United States, the smallest in any week since September, 1895, against 239 last year, and 22 in Canada, against 20 last year.

THE AMALGAMATED STRUGGLE.

Will Have a Fight With Manufacturers Over Tinplate Scale.

DETROIT, May 29 .- The annual convention of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of America, has completed its sessions. President Mahlon M. Garland was again re-elected. Stephen Madden was elected secretary and treasurer and John Williams, assistant secretary; trustees, John Pierce and Theodore Shaffer of Pittsburg, and Daniel Mullane of Youngstown. President Garland was chosen delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention next December.

The association's representatives will meet the mannfacturers in Pittsburg a few days hence, and there will be a struggle over the tinplate wage scale. the manufacturers having repeatedly declared that they will not grant the increase of about 15 per cent scheduled by the Amalgamated association.

in the Duquesne game when he should have had none.

The Syracuse Herald last Sunday contained a picture of the Auburn team. The picture of Lynch is very poor, but Twaddle has an excellent likeness.

The review of the players says: "Twaddle is all right, and is a prime favorite with the fans. He is bound to get to the top of the ladder some day.

"Pitcher Lynch was released during the week, as the pay roll was found to exceed the salary limit and someone had to go. He is a clever young tellow."

Liszt to Von Bulow's Mother.

Hans is evidently gifted with a mosical organization of the rarest kind His executive talent will easily place him in the front rank of the greatest pianists, and his essays at composition denote quite exceptional qualities of imagination, of individuality and of conception. Besides, Hans has taken an antipathy to every career which would sever him from art. Permit me, then, to confide to your motherly love the happy solution of the noble struggle between his natural vocation and that destined for him, however bright and alluring it might be, and in view of the sentiments which dictate this letter pray pardon the intercession I have ventured to make to you today .- "Early Correpondence of Hans Van Bulow.

Have Particulars.

Of course it cannot be known when civilized nations first began to fix certain days It Causes Much Discussion at for the annual commemoration of the acts of their dead heroes, but so natural is the custom that it must have arisen among the oldest nations. By a rare combination of circumstances, however, we have a verbatim report of one Memorial day address, delivered 2,322 years ago by the greatest man of his age.

We know, moreover, that, unlike many so called orations reported in ancient history, this one was delivered very nearly as reported, for it was a written address, and the report comes to us by Thucydides, an enemy of the orator. The great war of Sparta and her allies against Athens and her allies had been in progress a year when the Greeks who had fallen in the first battles were honored with a magnificent funeral, and Pericles, then ruler of Athens, made the speech.

It is really wonderful to note how much of it could be adopted word for word in a Memorial day address of today. He began founded Athens, and of their successors who had defended her against Persia and brave young men had died-to preserve that glorious liberty-and thus continued:

"For we enjoy a form of government which does not copy the laws of our neighbors, but we are ourselves rather a pattern from its not being administrated for the benefit of the few, but of the many, it is called a democracy, but with regard to its laws all enjoy equality as concerns private affairs, while with regard to public rank each man, according as he has reputation for anything, is preferred for public honors, not so much from consideration of party as of merit. Nor, again, on the ground of poverty, if he be able to do the state any service, is he prevented by the obscurity of his position.

This was not sarcasm. He really meant it. We are at liberty, however, to surmise that Pericles meant to set forth what the object of their government was rather than what it really accomplished, for he goes on to relate how carefully they observe the laws, because they are of their own choosing, how recreations are provided for all classes of men and equally in their enjoyment, how the freedom of Athens is the envy of mankind, and is so highly regarded by Athenians that every one would rather die fighting than lose it. Indeed, if he spoke exact truth, it is much to be feared that no modern state is equal to it. His closing paragraph might appropriately be recited to any American audience on this Memorial day of 1897. It ran thus:

Wherefore to the parents of these dead

I will not offer condolence so much as consolation, for they know that they lived subject to misfortunes, but that happy is their lot who have gained the most glorious death as these have, and theirs whose sorrow is as yours; their life so measured that it ended in honor, and even so your sorrow. Difficult indeed I know it is to persuade you of this, as you must be reminded of your loss by the good fortune of others, and sorrow is most keenly felt, not for the loss of that of which one is with-Owing to a typographical error George out much experience, but of that which Kennedy was credited with eight errors one loses after being accustomed to it. But bear up in hope of your other children, who have them, and you who are old consider that the long period before was so much clear gain, that your time of grief is but short while the fame of your lost ones is long, for the love of honor is the only feeling that never grows old, and as age advances it is not the gain of treasure, as some assert, that can cheer the heart. but only the enjoyment of honor.

Such were the golden words of this the oldest Memorial day address recorded. But it is a pain to complete the story. Soon after the city was crowded by fugitives, the dreadful plague came, and Pericles and all his family died of it. Deprived of his clear leadership, the Athenians wasted their resources, and at the end of a long war were thoroughly subjugated and put under the sway of the infamous "thirty tyrants." Yet it is wonderful what a clear idea this man, 430 B. C., had of what a republic ought to be.

As morphology teaches us that the petals of flowers are nothing but modified leaves, says a writer in Meehan's Monthly, we might imagine that the earlier attempts at inflorescence would be green and not yellow.

A Hot Debate and the Presbyterians Get In a Parliamentary Tangle - Favor Total Abstinence - The Session the Shortest For Years.

EAGLE LAKE, Ind., May 29.—The Presbyterian general assembly, which adjourned, was the shortest session in eight years. In spite af the desire to finish up its business there was little unusual haste and the record showed that the assembly was ready to defer adjournment if necessary in order to by a eulogy of their ancestors who had attain a suitable and reasonable decision of questions that remained to be decided. The discussion was long and covered many points, but the petition was finally decided in the negative. The reason given was an unwillingness to recognize color distinctions in the denomination.

Dr. John Clark Hill of Chicago presented a report on theological seminaries, giving acts and statistics as to each. The matter of the assembly control of seminaries came up in the same report. The institutions at Omaha, Dubuque and Lincoln reported the charter changes which had been asked by previous assemblies. The Auburn, McCormick, Newark German seminaries said they did not see their way clear to make the changes.

In closing the committee recommended the following resolution: "That the assembly accepts as sincere the repeated positive and explicit written declarations of seminaries, that they are loyal to the church, and that their teachings and properties are in their judgment fully safeguarded to the general assembly, but if at any time in the future these seminaries should find that changes could be made in their repective charters as the general assembly has desired, it will be gratifying to made.

in the Duquesne game when he should have had none.

The Syracuse Herald last Sunday contained a picture of the Auburn team. Twaddle has an excellent likeness.

The review of the players says: Twaddle is all right, and is a prime favorite with the fans. He is bound to get to the top of the ladder some day.

"Pitcher Lynch was released during the week, as the pay roll was found to exceed the salary limit and someone had to go. He is a clever young tellow."

Services at St. Aloysius.

At 5 o'clock this morning a large number of people partook of the sacrament and observed the confession in St. Aloysius church. Father Smyth was assisted by the Mission Fathers, Kress and Graham, and Father Gourley of Rochester. At four o'clock tomorrow afternoon the mission fathers will deliver lectures to men only.

The lecture at the church last night was largely attended.

Liszt to Von Bulow's Mother.

Hans is evidently gifted with a mosical organization of the rarest kind His executive talent will easily place him in the front rank of the greatest pianists, and his essays at composition denote quite exceptional qualities of imagination, of individuality and of conception. Besides, Hans has taken an antipathy to every career which would sever him from art. Permit me, then, to confide to your motherly love the happy solution of the noble struggle between his natural vocation and that destined for him, however bright and alluring it might be, and in view of the sentiments which dictate this letter pray pardon the intercession I have ventured to make to you today .- "Early Correspondence of Hans Van Bulow.

A Unique Law.

A unique law is still in force at Stratford, in Prussian Pomerania. A paragraph of the police regulation of 1840, which is still being enacted, reads, Smoking in the streets or promenades of this town is positively prohibited, violators of this law being punished by a fine, or eventually by a number of marks the fine amounts to."

Have Particulars.

Of course it cannot be known when civilized nations first began to fix certain days It Causes Much Discussion at for the annual commemoration of the acts of their dead heroes, but so natural is the custom that it must have arisen among the oldest nations. By a rare combination of circumstances, however, we have a verbatim report of one Memorial day address, delivered 2,322 years ago by the greatest man of his age.

We know, moreover, that, unlike many so called orations reported in ancient history, this one was delivered very nearly as reported, for it was a written address, and the report comes to us by Thucydides, an enemy of the orator. The great war of Sparta and her allies against Athens and the Greeks who had fallen in the first battles were honored with a magnificent funerand Pericles, then ruler of Athens, made the speech.

It is really wonderful to note how much of it could be adopted word for word in a Memorial day address of today. He began founded Athens, and of their successors who had defended her against Persia and made her free. He then told why these that glorious liberty-and thus continued: which does not copy the laws of our neighbors, but we are ourselves rather a pattern to others than imitators of them. In name, from its not being administrated for the benefit of the few, but of the many, it is presbytery in Arkansas. The discuscalled a democracy, but with regard to its each man, according as he has reputation for anything, is preferred for public honors, not so much from consideration of party as of merit. Nor, again, on the ground of poverty, if he be able to do the state any service, is he prevented by the obscurity of his position.

This was not sarcasm. He really meant it. We are at liberty, however, to surmise that Pericles meant to set forth what the object of their government was rather than what it really accomplished, for he goes on to relate how carefully they observe the laws, because they are of their own choosing, how recreations are provided for all classes of men and equally in their enjoyment, how the freedom of Athens is the envy of mankind, and is so highly regarded by Athenians that every one would rather die fighting than lose it. Indeed, if he spoke exact truth, it is much to be feared that no modern state is equal to it. His closing paragraph might appropriately be recited to any American audience on this Memorial day of 1897. It ran thus:

"Wherefore to the parents of these dead I will not offer condolence so much as consolation, for they know that they lived subject to misfortunes, but that happy is their lot who have gained the most glorious death as these have, and theirs whose sorrow is as yours; their life so measured that it ended in honor, and even so your Passed balls-Davis, 2; Southall, 4. Wild sorrow. Difficult indeed I know it is to persuade you of this, as you must be reminded of your loss by the good fortune of others, and sorrow is most keenly felt, not for the loss of that of which one is with-Owing to a typographical error George out much experience, but of that which Kennedy was credited with eight errors one loses after being accustomed to it. But bear up in hope of your other children, who have them, and you who are old consider that the long period before was so much clear gain, that your time of grief is but short while the fame of your lost The picture of Lynch is very poor, but only feeling that never grows old, and as ones is long, for the love of honor is the age advances it is not the gain of treasure, as some assert, that can cheer the heart, but only the enjoyment of honor.

Such were the golden words of this the oldest Memorial day address recorded. But it is a pain to complete the story. Soon after the city was crowded by fugitives, the dreadful plague came, and Pericles and all his family died of it. Deprived of his clear leadership, the Athenians wasted their resources, and at the end of a long war were thoroughly subjugated and put under the sway of the infamous "thirty tyrants." Yet it is wonderful what a clear idea this man, 430 B. C., had of what a republic ought to be.

The Original Color of Flowers.

Some scientific papers have endeavored to show that in the early ages all flowers were yellow, and the various colors we now have have simply followed the introduction of insects—that flowers have, in other words, been made beautiful in order to render them attractive to insects, to encourage their visits, so that the cross fertilization of the flowers might be better effected. As morphology teaches us that the petals of flowers are nothing but modified leaves, says a writer in Meehan's Monthly, we might imagine that the earlier attempts at inflorescence would be green and not yellow.

EAGLE LAKE, Ind., May 29.—The herallies had been in progress a year when Presbyterian general assembly, which adjourned, was the shortest session in eight years. In spite af the desire to finish up its business there was little unusual haste and the record showed that the assembly was ready to defer adjournment if necessary in order to by a eulogy of their ancestors who had attain a suitable and reasonable decision of questions that remained to be decided. The reason given was an unwillingness to recognize color distinctions in the denomination.

Dr. John Clark Hill of Chicago presented a report on theological seminaries, giving acts and statistics as to each. The matter of the assembly control of seminaries came up in the same report. The institutions at Omaha, Dubuque and Lincoln reported the charter changes which had been asked by previous assemblies. The Auburn, McCormick, Newark German seminaries said they did not see their way clear to make the changes. In closing the committee recommended the following resolution: "That the assembly accepts as sincere the repeated positive and explicit written declarations of seminaries, that they are loyal to the church, and that their teachings and properties are in their judgment fully safeguarded to the general assembly, but if at any time in the future these seminaries should find that changes could be made in their respective charters as the general assembly has desired, it will be gratifying to the whole church to have such changes time of trains, return limit, and other

The subject of tuberculous meat is one of the greatest importance to the community at large in view of the fact, which has been scientifically demonstrated, that it is possible for that disease to be propagated by the consumption of meat so tainted.

Various projects have from time to time been suggested for the treatment of meat to make it harmless to the community at large. The safest plan is, of course, the destruction of such diseased

A famous German scientist has, however, proposed that tuberculous meat should be divided into at least two office classes, and only that deeply impregnated with the germs of disease should be condemned absolutely and irrevocably to cremation by the sanitary authorities. ### And She Wasn't Extravagant.

One of the exhibits in a suit for divorce tried in Baltimore, in which, among other things, the wife was charged with reckless extravagance, had these items as a sample of one week's expenditures by the woman in the case: Hat, $200; notions, $50; chewing gum and tobacco, $24; brushes and paints, $10; cologne, $9.75; ice cream, $7.75; oysters, $10, and cigarettes, $1.75. The jury decided that this sort of thing was a trifle too much to ask any man to submit to, and helped, rather more than anything else, to influence the jury to give to the man the separation he asked for. Yet the defendant calmly asserted that there was not a purchase made in that list but was absolutely essential to her comfort. This guileless young woman positively prided herself on the fact that extravagance was one sin of which she was absolutely guiltless. - Detroit

Words That Trouble the Tongue.

Drimtaidhvickhillichattan is the name of a small hamlet in the isle of Mull containing not more than a dozen inhabitants. A sample of Welsh nomenclature is Mynyddywllyn, which is the name of a parish close to Cardiff, while another of the same kind is Llanfairpwllgwngyll.

Perhaps, however, the Germans may be fairly said to carry off the palm in word coining. How is this for a sample, Constantinopelischerdudelsackpfeifer, or this one, Jungfrauenzimmerdurchschwindersuchtoedungs?

The first means a Constantinopolitan bagpipe player, and the last is the name of a young ladies' club which adorns the brass plate of the door of a house in Cologne to this day. Rabelais gives the following name to a particular book which was supposed to be in the library of Pantagruel's medical student friend Victor, "Antipericatametanaparbeugedantecribrationes-Toordicantium," while Anantachaturdasivratakatha is an actual Sanscrit word to be found in any Sanscrit dictionary, and the word Cluninstaridysarchedes occurs in the works of Plautus, the Latin comedy writer .- Harper's Round Table.

HATS IN PARLIAMENT.

They Are Important Factors In the British Lower House.

Of all the customs and traditions that still cling to the house of commons, even in this matter of fact age, the hat plays the most important part. In the last century one of the speakers permitted the introduction of oranges, and even nuts, if they were not loudly cracked, on the pleathat they were not "tangible articles of food." But, some years after, this decision was reversed by anof Riverview cemetery will be held other speaker, who, on high medical authority, declared that as it would be possible to support life on either of these two vegetables they must be considered tangible products, and their public consumption would, therefore, not be permitted. Out of this decision a custom arose, which, not being checked, slowly deepened into a tradition. The dexterity which Bobby Lowe exhibited in transferring a packet of sandwiches from one of the side pockets of the remarkable coats he used to affect to the interior of his hat and the way in which he would use his headgear to conceal the process of mastication were, it is said, sights to behold. The occupants of the ministerial and front opposition benches are able to moisten their throats during the delivery of a speech with a little liquid, but, although the private member is not expressly excluded from the participation in this privilege, no provision is made for the consumption of any lubricant he may require. The traditions of the house allow him to conceal a sandwich or a biscuit in his pocket, but not a bottle. Any honorable member may have a glass of water, but, while the leading members of the opposition have the great central table on which to deposit their glasses of water—which is not supposed any other liquid, ahem!-the private member is expected to hide his glass in
